

In 1997, Pope John Paul II called for consecrated life to be promoted throughout the universal Church. He declared February 2, the feast of the Presentation of the Lord, to be observed as World Day for Consecrated Life (WDCL). In the United States, when February 2 is not on a Sunday, we celebrate on the Sunday after the Presentation. This year WDCL is observed on February 5, the Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time.

The celebration of World Day for Consecrated Life invites all the Church to reflect on the role of Consecrated Life within the Christian community. Those who choose to live a consecrated life do so for the sake of the gospel.

Some Christian women and men respond to God's call to become followers of Jesus through profession of vows and a life dedicated to prayer and service. They live out the consecrated life in different ways. Religious sisters, nuns, brothers, religious priests, and monks consecrate their lives through their profession of the evangelical vows and live as part of a community. Single lay people may choose to be consecrated virgins and make private vows to the local bishop as they live out their vocation in various walks of life. Secular institutes are another form of living the consecrated life as single people. Those who become followers of Jesus through the consecrated life bless the Church.

The USA Council of Serra International offers this resource to assist you in your local celebration of World Day for Consecrated Life. We hope this kit provide you with ideas to create a meaningful celebration in your parish, diocese, religious community or other church institution.

World Day for Consecrated Life

HOMILY NOTES
Year B

In today's two New Testament readings from 1 Corinthians and St. Mark's Gospel, we hear of two men who are "on a mission." For Paul, his mission is to be a "slave to all" in order that he "might win over as many [people] as possible" to the Gospel message. Jesus' mission was to accomplish what he was sent to do, namely "...to go on to the villages that I may preach there also." This mission gave both Paul and Jesus a sense of meaning, a sense of purpose in what they were about and an identity as to who they were in relationship to those whose lives they touched. Jesus says clearly "for this purpose I have come...to preach and drive out demons throughout the whole of Galilee". For Paul, it was his purpose in life to "become all things to all, to save at least some."

We are asked today to pray in solidarity with Catholic Christians throughout the world on this World Day of Prayer for Consecrated Life. At a time when people lack a clear understanding of what "consecrated life" is all about, we need to turn to our scripture readings to rediscover the meaning and purpose of this life; a life in which "the characteristic features of Jesus – the chaste, poor and obedient one – are made constantly 'visible' in the midst of the world." (Vita Consecrata)

How are the features of Christ Jesus made visible in the world by people who have embraced the consecrated life? In order to best answer this question we must first identify the characteristic features of Jesus. At his baptism, the heavens opened up and a voice was heard saying "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased...hear him." Jesus was witness to his Father's great love of humankind. His life, death and resurrection were testimony to his obedience to the Father's call and to the prompting of the Spirit throughout his life. The attentiveness to this call and to the prompting of the Spirit took place when Jesus sought out periods of solitude and time for prayer. Amidst his busy days of ministering to the lame, the blind and the sick, Jesus often took time for prayer as we heard in today's Gospel message. "Rising very early before dawn, he left and went off to a deserted place, where he prayed." A deep sense of prayer and being connected with the Father was a characteristic feature of Jesus – an essential aspect of the consecrated life.

The second characteristic feature of Jesus was his desire to do the will of his Father. Jesus proclaimed, "I have not come to do my will but rather the will of him who sent me." God the Father willed that Jesus enter this world to show others the way to the Kingdom through his ministry, service, and love for them. The passion for doing God's will in ministry – through the sacraments, education, social service, nursing, and the contemplative experience of the monastic life – is yet another essential aspect of the consecrated life. “Through the many charisms of spiritual and apostolic life bestowed on them by the Holy Spirit, they [consecrated men and women] have helped to make the mystery and mission of the Church shine forth, and in doing so have contributed to the renewal of society.” (Vita Consecrata)

In addition to taking time for prayer and embracing his mission, Jesus’ ministry was characterized by his desire to be with his disciples within the context of community. Except for the times that he went into solitude for prayer, Jesus performed his ministry in the presence of the apostles. He commissioned them to go out and preach in pairs as a support for one another. The experience of community is another characteristic feature of Jesus.

For those men and women who have committed themselves to the consecrated life, the desire for having a deeply prayerful and spiritual life rooted in Jesus Christ, a passionate love for ministry and a thirst for the support of a caring and nurturing community are essential aspects of their chosen vocation. If you know a person who has chosen to live the consecrated life, hopefully you have seen in their lives the features of Jesus Christ.

(The homilist may want to share at this time a story about their experience of ministering with or knowing someone in the consecrated life and how that person may have influenced them or touched their life in a meaningful manner.)

The Church continues to need consecrated individuals as part of the fabric of its faith community. There are several reasons for this – first, the consecrated person stands as a visible witness to the Gospel message of Jesus by their professing the evangelical counsels of poverty, chastity and obedience. Secondly, consecrated men and women work at making “real” the Kingdom of God here on earth through the charism of their founders and foundresses – they stand in relationship with the people of God and oftentimes become the face of God to the poor, disenfranchised, the abandoned, the weak, the sinner, and those who have lost a sense of hopefulness in their broken and fragmented world. Thirdly, consecrated persons serve as beacons of hope in an increasingly secular world, one in which doubt and confusion cloud over the light that comes from Jesus Christ Himself.

On this World Day for Consecrated Life, consider ways that you can meet or get to know someone who has embraced the consecrated life. Ask them why they have chosen this lifestyle and hear their story – how they have met Christ along the way and how they have been Christ to others...perhaps you may want to join them on their journey.

BULLETIN ANNOUNCEMENTS

Week Prior to WDCL

Since 1997 the universal Church celebrates World Day for Consecrated Life close to the feast of the Presentation of the Lord, February 2. Next Sunday we will observe this day with a special emphasis on the call to consecrated life in today's world. (Add any other information about your observance.)

Week of WDCL

This Sunday we celebrate World Day for Consecrated Life. We recognize and give thanks for those who have consecrated their lives to God and the Church through the vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience. Some join a religious congregation or a secular institute. Others remain single and make profession to God through the local bishop and are known as consecrated virgins. The consecrated life is one way that men and women live out their baptismal commitment as followers of Jesus. (Add other information about your observance.)

SUGGESTED ACTIVITIES

Diocese, Parishes, Schools, Serra Clubs:

- Invite members of institutes of consecrated life from your parish to serve as ministers for the Sunday liturgy.
- Invite members of institutes of consecrated life to speak to adults/children in religious education programs.
- Host a prayer service and reception (See Prayer Service).
- Offer a day of perpetual adoration dedicated to vocations to consecrated life.
- Encourage open houses throughout the diocese.
- Sponsor a vocation fair, walkathon, or rally highlighting institutes of consecrated life.
- Provide copies of vocation magazines, brochures, and flyers (contact your diocesan vocation office).
- Encourage vocation awareness through diaconate, lay ministry, parents' baptism programs, family ministries.
- Have a vocation section in parish bulletin, bulletin board, newsletters. Highlight stories of people who live the consecrated life, especially those who serve in the local parish or who entered from the parish.
- Work with local communicators to develop media coverage with stories, television & radio public service announcements about the consecrated life, inspirational e-movies.

Institutes of Consecrated Life:

- Invite friends, employees, benefactors, and families to join you for prayer, talk, a meal, or an open house. Share about your life and charism.
- Plan a simple prayer in which you share your vocation stories together. Renew your vows. Invite interested people to join you.
- Do a press release or share a story about your institute with the local press.
- Open your doors to college students for a place to study and pray.
- Sponsor a "holy hour" to pray for vocations.
- Host a "Come & See" experience or "Nun Run".
- Sponsor a summer camp and invite young people to participate and learn about your congregation.
- Create a congregation vocation website that is interactive: chat room, blog, podcast, invitation to conference call with other discerners.
